Georgio

On the Inguri river, which sits on the border of Georgia and Abkazia, the spring drought leaves islands of fertile soil littered in its waters. Described as a ‘Georgian masterpiece’, the film follows a weathered grandfather and his granddaughter as they build their home, plant the fields, and reap what they sow. The island is meant to be their place of peace, but the world invades their paradise. The film was nominated for Best Foreign Language Oscar in 2014.
